Jose,

Yes, not only did I see and read it but it actually proves Billy was truthful. The key fact is that it wasn't until March 12, 1979 that it was confirmed that Io was the most volcanically active body in the solar system. Not only did Billy first publish his information on October 18, 1978 but Wendelle Stevens had it all in his hands no later than March 9, 1979.

Even if one could credit Billy with all sorts of abilities to create an elaborate hoax, providing that information to Wendelle three days before it was officially announced is a pretty good trick.

More importantly, the author assumes all sorts of things not in evidence, such as Billy's access to, and understanding of, the scientific information re the Jupiter discoveries, and/or his access to a translator (who would have come forward at some point), his reason for publishing scientific information sure to attract criticism if it was wrong, which it wasn't, etc.

We have to remember that this was back in the 1970s, no proof that Billy had a subscription to any scientific magazines (which wouldn't have been published and reached him in time, let alone that he was following the story in the newspapers if such details were being published at that time in whatever papers Billy read, if any.

But additionally compelling, even if Billy could have somehow inexplicably "hoaxed" the information, why would he bother when the SAME contact has ten predictions that all came later true, the death of Indira Ghandi in 1984 being the last one years later? Remember that Stevens found out that he had accidentally been given the predictions from the same contact as the Jupiter information.

I think we might owe Ike a debt of gratitude for showing how actually unlikely, even impossible, it would have been for Billy to accomplish all that. In their efforts to prove Billy wrong the skeptics really just show how far beyond them Billy is, and with only one arm! Of course, if Billy didn't have any arms they'd accuse him of faking everything with his teeth.

And, when you look at this story about news from last week, you have to wonder if the poor skeptics, who always want "more proof", aren't getting ready to go back to doing card tricks at children's birthday parties and leave the serious business to more qualified people.
